A novel method and parameters can be used to evaluate the slurry flow quantitatively. The slurry flow is depended on the rotational speeds of the workpiece/platen, the slurry flow vector dramatically increases with an increase in the rotational speed over 40 min⁻¹. The inflow ratio to the contact surface and its region decrease with an increase in the rotational speed.